Two categories, two rules

Access points

- Must be usable by everyone who may be experiencing homelessness
- The same assessment approach applies at every access point
- No one is turned away because a site serves a different population

CPD-17-01 §II.B.2(a) and (f) · pp. 7–9

Agency-based assessors

- Assess households already enrolled in their own program
- Permitted and useful — but not a public front door
- Selection criteria for a subpopulation must be documented in writing

CPD-17-01 §II.B.2(g)(1) · p. 9

Separate access points are permitted — not required — for five populations: adults without children, adults with children, unaccompanied youth, people fleeing domestic violence, and people at risk of homelessness. DV coordinated entry is a separate, ongoing design effort.

Holding now, resuming in 2027

As KCRHA focuses its work and calibrates resources, we are managing coverage by holding new program designations until this baseline review is complete.

The review will cover

- Which agencies assess at their own programs rather than as access points
- Subpopulation criteria, and whether they are documented
- Volume by site
- How many 211 referrals reach an access point
- Travel time to the nearest door by sub-region

Then, next year

- Resume system design work
- Expand access points where the analysis shows the gaps are
- Close documentation gaps for agencies already onboarded
